To the American Troops Overseas.

WHEN YOU COME HOME.

When you come home, dear, all will be fair,
Home is not home if you are not there,—
You in my heart, dear, you at my side,
When you come home at even-tide.

Birds in the garden, all day long
Singing for me their happy song,
Flow'rs in the sunshine, wind and dew,
All of them speak to me of you.
You that I long for, near or far,
You that I follow like a star,
Days may be weary, weary and long,
You will come home at even-song!

When you come home, dear, when you come home,
No more to leave me, no more to roam,
God will remember! God will provide!
When you come home at even-tide.

The trumpet sounds. I hear the shouts of men:
"Fall in!" I shall not kiss his lips again
Nor stay the soldier's step, nor halt the hand
Of him who marches off at war's command.
But, God, 'twas only yesterday, it seems,
I dried his baby tears and soothed his dreams.
So now this simple prayer to Thee I make:
Bring back my boy to me, for Jesus' sake.
Do Thou his heart keep true, his honour whole,
Unscath'd his body and unsear'd his soul;
Thus bring him back, if such Thy will may be,
But---bring him back, O Lord, bring him back to me!
